Visit of:

Bangkok's Chinatown is located in the west of the capital, in the Samphanthawong district, one of the oldest areas of the city, whose main street is Yaowarat Road. More than 200 years ago, Yaowarat Road was the main commercial street for the Chinese community.

Stroll through the flower market. This incredible market is the main wholesale market for flowers of all kinds. It is open 24 hours a day..

Wat Traimit or the Temple of the Golden Buddha: Who has never visited Bangkok without falling under the spell of the great Golden Buddha, a famous attraction throughout the Land of Smiles! This insignificant pagoda attracted little attention until the mid-1950s, when the occupants of the place discovered that the idol of the pagoda was an unusual statue; its layer of stucco and glass concealed solid gold. The Golden Buddha is 3 meters high, and its weight is estimated at 5.5 tons, making it the largest gold sculpture in the entire world.
